FORWARD

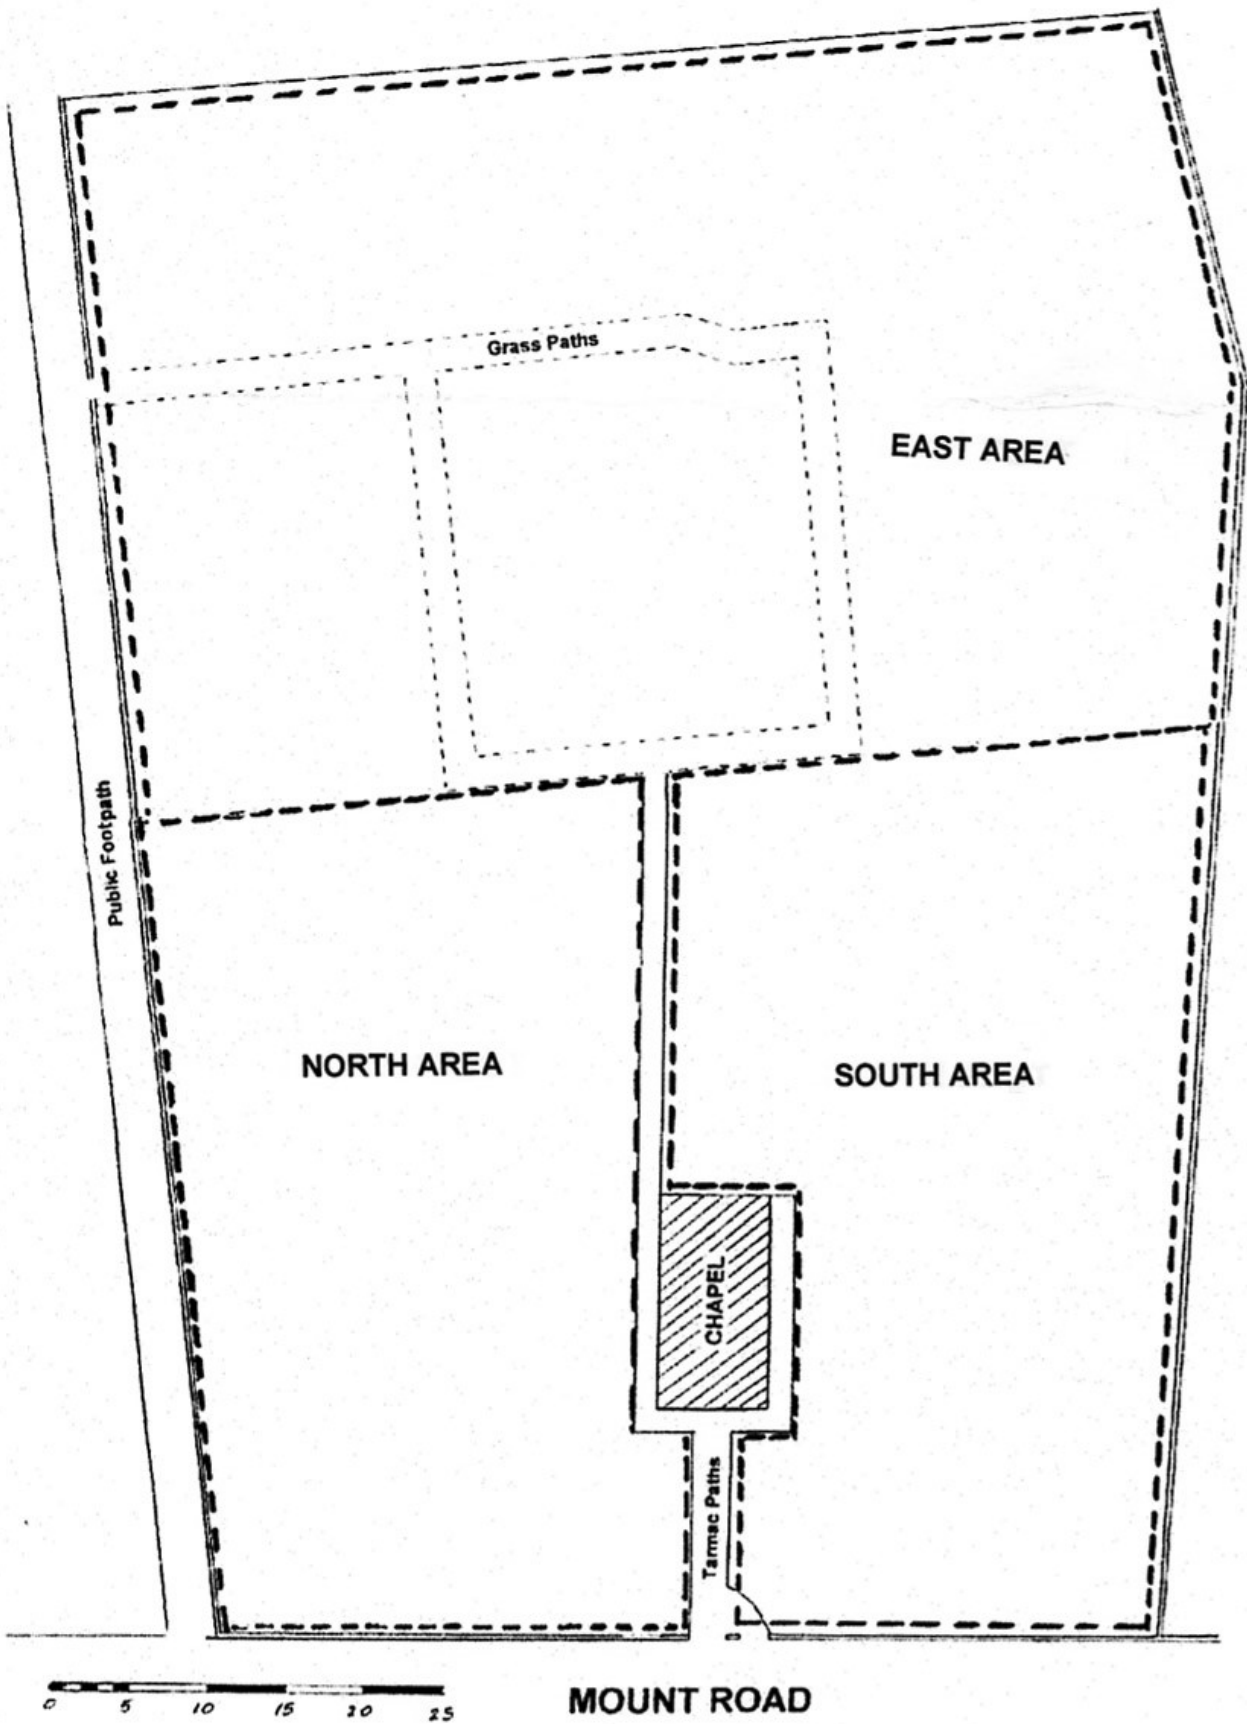

This cemetery, enclosed by a limestone wall, was opened by the parish church burial board in about 1850 and it included a fine architecturally designed Chapel of Rest. By about 1960 the cemetery was full except for a few later burials in family plots. The cemetery and chapel fell into decline such that the cemetery is now very overgrown and the chapel is now an office for a local business. Most burials now take place in a Council maintained burial ground which abuts the old cemetery.

The transcription of the monuments took place in 2003/04 when most of the site had been cleared of vegetation. The transcriptions were checked in 2009 but unfortunately many of the stones were inaccessible due to dense vegetation and the engravings had become further eroded. However those that could be read proved to be accurate and a few recent headstones have been added.

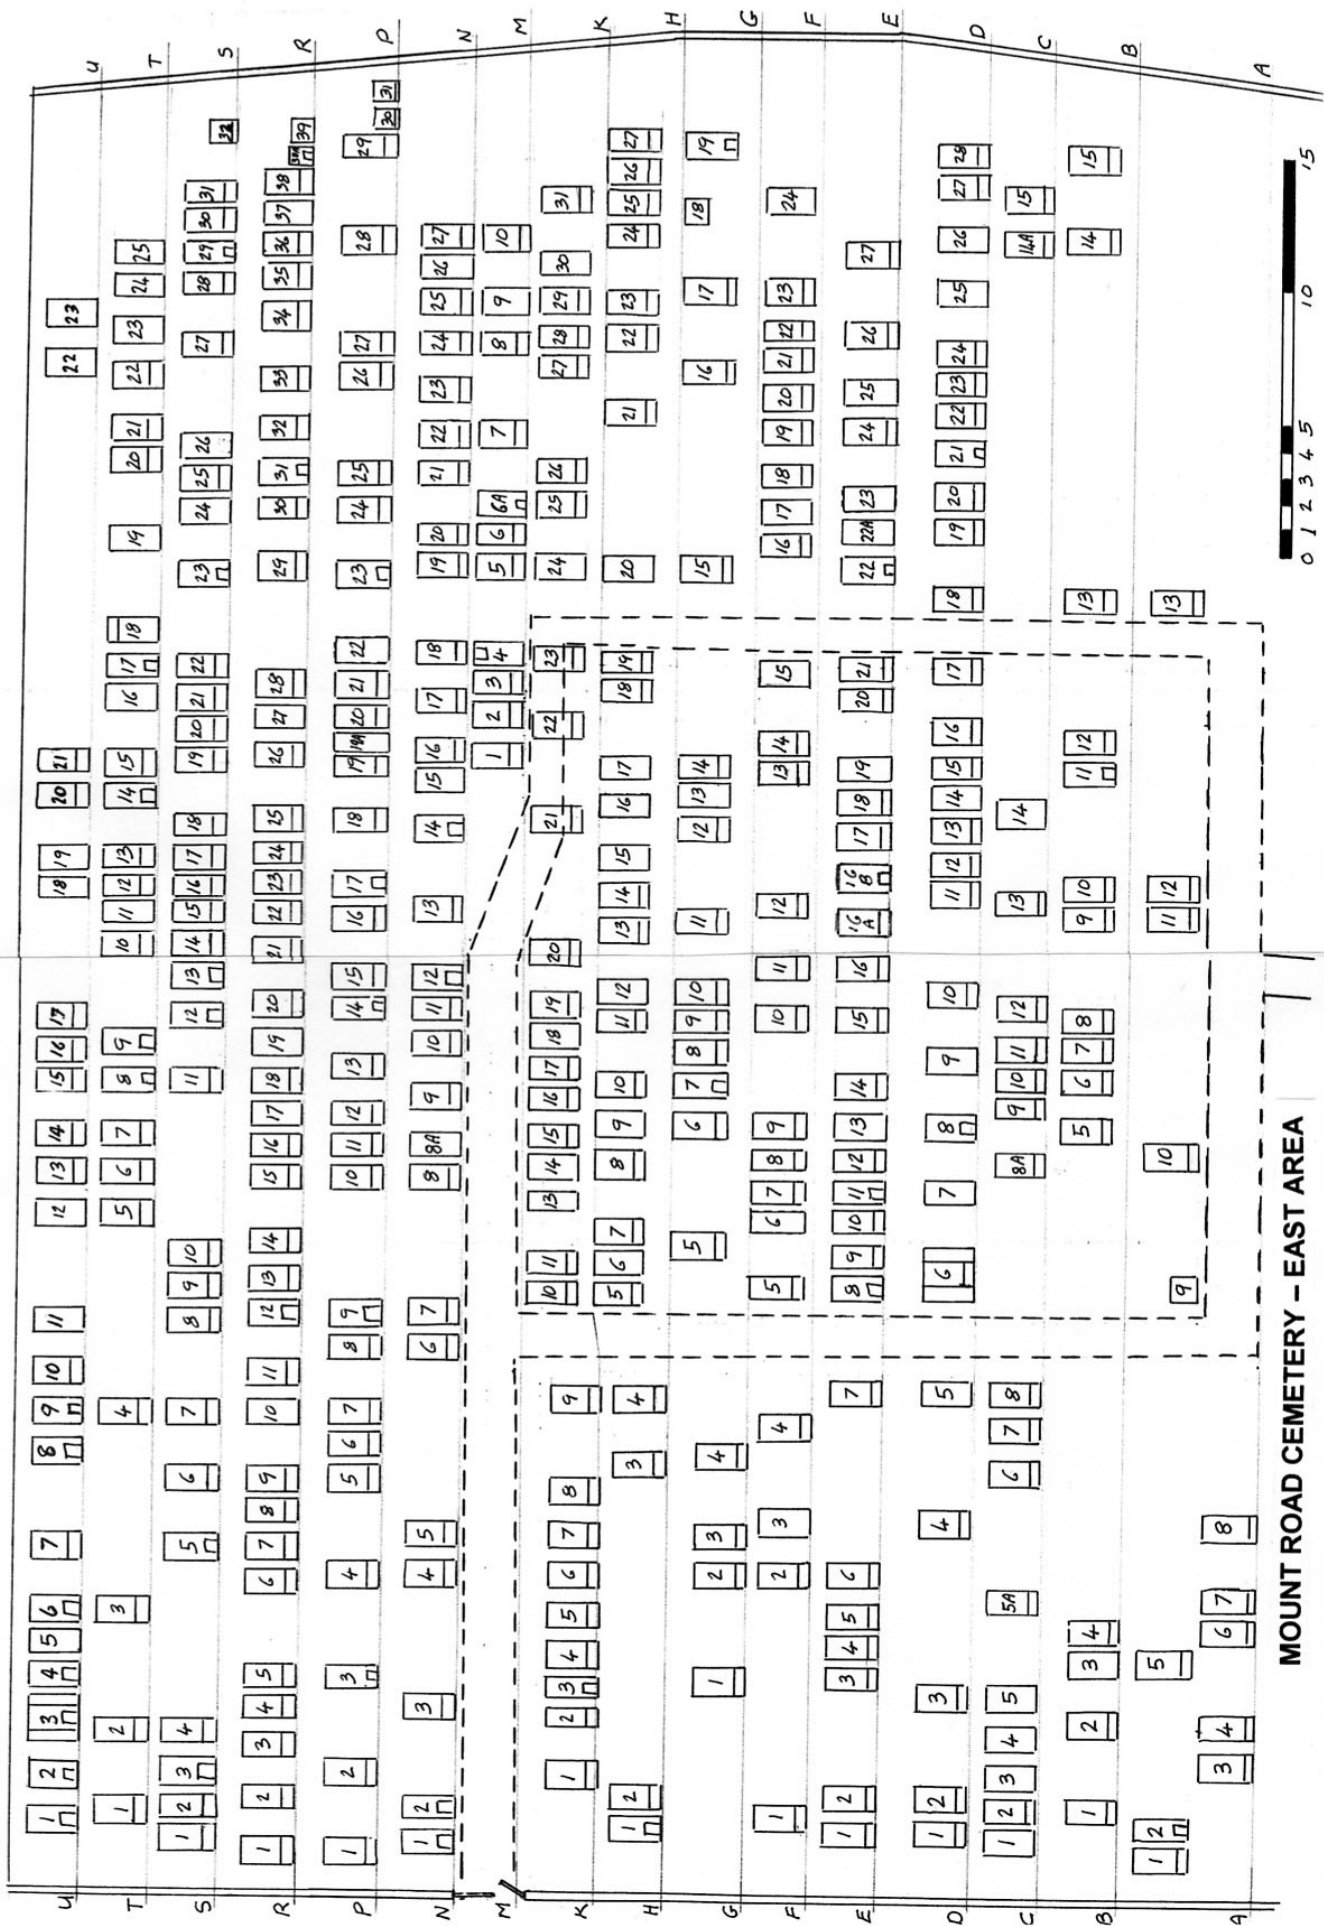

The cemetery has been divided into three areas, North, South and East, for ease of identifying individual graves but the index of names covers all three areas. The parish church possesses a plan, dated 1902, of the burial plots in the East area. This plan has hand written names of owners in the various plots. The names on this plan have been included at the end of this document and a note made where the names tallied with names on existing grave stones. The names on this plan have not been included in the index.

Finally my thanks must go to the following who helped me in the production of this document. My wife Sue who helped with transcribing and checking, Denys Owen and Paul Evers-Swindell who spent many hours transcribing and several others who spent a few hours transcribing. The Parish Church gave permission to carry out the work and Clwyd Family History Society has agreed to publish the document.
